

LIFESAVING SOCIETY

The Lifeguarding Experts

Applying for Recognition of Non-Canadian Certifications

The Lifesaving Society is the lifesaving and lifeguard certification agency in Canada. The Society offers a progressive system of training leading to certifications in lifesaving, lifeguarding, first aid and leadership.

Individuals from other countries relocating to Ontario may want to know how their previous training may fit into the Canadian system. Individuals who seek recognition by the Lifesaving Society Ontario branch may apply for a formal assessment of lifesaving training competencies of non-Canadian awards, certifications and previous training.

The application process is as follows:

1. Applicants submit the completed application with the processing fee and necessary supporting English documents.
2. The Society reviews the documents provided by the applicant.
3. The Society advises the applicant of the outcome of the review and the applicant's next steps.

Before applying, it is helpful to understand:

- Applicants may be required to purchase additional reference manuals or resource materials.
- Some Lifesaving Society programs have minimum age and/or award prerequisites. The Society may waive an award prerequisite for applicants who hold corresponding awards from a Royal Life Saving Society Commonwealth nation (whose lifesaving programs are similar in curriculum and evaluation criteria to Canada's). Such applicants may be asked to complete a written assignment based on the Canadian Lifesaving Manual.
- The Ontario government regulates the minimum age and certifications for lifeguards and instructors in public swimming pools. Applicants seeking employment in Ontario as a lifeguard must earn the Lifesaving Society National Lifeguard certification. Applicants seeking employment in Ontario as an instructor must earn the Lifesaving Society Swim Instructor and Lifesaving Instructor certification. There are no exceptions.
- Standard First Aid is a prerequisite to the National Lifeguard program and required by law to work as a lifeguard in an Ontario public swimming pool. Applicants must earn a Standard First Aid certification from the Lifesaving Society Canada or from one of these approved agencies. There are no exceptions.
- Overnight camps in Ontario must comply with the Recreational Camps Regulation 503/17 under Ontario's Health Protection and Promotion Act (www.publications.gov.on.ca). Camps maintain aquatic safety supervision standards and water safety based on this Regulation and in accordance with Ontario Camps Association Guidelines and Standards (www.ontariocampsassociation.ca).
