

Janet Johnston-Small, Norma Johnston (Cotter) and Meagan Small.

Three generations of lifeguards

In the late 1930s, Norma Johnston (Cotter) learned to swim at the beaches in Toronto with her father. She competed with Lakeshore Swim Club for five years. During that time, she swam open-water swims at the CNE, the Canadian Championships in Quebec, and the Long Pond at Centre Island in Toronto. She still has a box full of engraved competition medals and awards to mark her distinguished love for aquatics. Norma was one of the first female lifeguards hired by the City of Toronto in 1947.

Her daughter Janet fell in love with the sport too, earning her awards in the 1980s. She worked as a lifeguard during summers throughout school before letting them expire after university. Years later, while recovering from an injury, Janet returned to the pool. She began swimming lengths and soon, swimming became a passion and a big part of her life once again.

An advertisement for the City of Orillia’s “All in One Course” ignited Janet’s desire to re-earn her instructor/ guard qualifications as a “bucket list” fitness goal. Janet registered for the program with the support of Aquatic & Fitness Supervisor Jack Mair, and re-earned her Bronze awards, Swim & Lifesaving Instructor and Standard First Aid in the spring of 2019. “Jack was so compassionate and wanted to see me reach my goal,” she said about the experience.

Meanwhile Janet’s daughter, Meagan Small, was due to recertify her National Lifeguard in the fall. Janet wanted to recertify with Meagan as a mother daughter duo. Her dream became reality when she became a fully certified National Lifeguard with her daughter in October 2019. Mair presented Janet’s and Meagan’s awards together. Janet said, “It brought a tear to my eye to attain this goal and to share it with my daughter Meagan. Lifeguarding is in our genes.”

Brian Miess succeeds Doug Ferguson

The Lifesaving Society Ontario Board of Directors announces the appointment of Brian Miess as CEO effective January 1, 2020. Well known in Lifesaving Society circles – provincially, nationally and internationally – Brian has been a member of the Society’s professional staff since 2005. He came to the Society with 15 years’ affiliate experience as Aquatics Director and member of the Town of Carleton Place’s senior management team.

Brian’s volunteer service with the Society included stints on the Ontario Board of Directors as Vice President Lifesaving Sport, as Chair of the Lifeguard Services Committee, and as a member of other Ontario and national committees and task forces. He has an intimate knowledge of the Society’s training, leadership and lifesaving sport programs – as a trainer, coach and affiliate.

Brian studied administration and business at the University of Ottawa. He is married with three children. Brian succeeds Doug Ferguson who retires after a 46-year career as Executive Director.

NEW – Lifesaving Society Instructor Manual

Out with the old, in with the new! The new Instructor Manual provides instructors with the essentials needed to successfully teach, coach and evaluate Lifesaving Society programs. Used with award guides, the Instructor Manual (which replaces Instructor Notes) is the required text on all instructor courses. Care has been taken to emphasize the practical application of teaching and learning principles. Use it to deliver and evaluate any award with confidence.

Note to Instructor Trainers

As of January 1, 2020, candidates will receive the new Instructor Manual in Swim Instructor Packs and Lifesaving Instructor Packs. You need to buy a copy, read it and reference it while teaching.

The new Instructor Manual is 108 pages, coil-bound and in full-colour. Price: $20.00. Buy your copy today from lifeguarddepot.com.

Lifesaving Society EFA and SFA certifications valid for three years (36 months) from date of certification

While Lifesaving Society certifications are held for life, the Society deems them “current” for a specific period – primarily for employment purposes – after which the award holder must “recertify.” Historically, this currency period is 24 months from the date of certification.

The Society’s two-year currency period is problematic in the world of workplace first aid. The Ontario government (e.g., WSIB, Ministry of Health Public Pools Regulation) observes a three-year currency period for Emergency First Aid (EFA) and Standard First Aid (SFA) as do most other Canadian issuers of first aid certificates. Recently, the Canadian Standards Association Technical Committee – while citing the increasing evidence for the validity of a two-year currency period for first aid certifications – recommended a three-year requalification period in line with the industry consensus.

In the interests of reducing confusion among employers and harmonizing the Lifesaving Society currency period with Ontario government regulations, CSA recommendations and the general practice among other workplace first aid providers, the Lifesaving Society Ontario has adopted a three-year period for the validity of its workplace EFA and SFA certifications only.

Going forward, the Society’s EFA and SFA certification cards will include a “Valid Until” date on the front. There is no change in the two-year currency period for all other Lifesaving Society certifications.

Employers must take note of the evidence that skill retention among emergency responders requires regular practice and more frequent recertification. Employers may require their aquatic staff to recertify their first aid certifications more frequently than every 36 months.

EFA AND SFA IN FIND A MEMBER

Find a Member is the industry standard for documenting certifications on site for both employers and staff. Find a Member service recognizes three-year currency for EFA and SFA certifications. When “Current Only” is selected, Find a Member will display EFA and SFA certifications earned within the last 36 months, and all other awards earned within the last 24 months.
